LID TO BE LIFTED IN LIQUOR SCANDAL

MRS. WILLEBRANDT CONDUCTS THE FEDERAL PROSECUTION

Arrests Expected in Connection With the Armand Drug Company Conspiracy—Many Cases of Whisky Withdrawn From Distillery at Troy.

The secrecy surrounding the sudden appearance in Ohio of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt added strength today to rumors that the lid is about to be blown off another great liquor conspiracy rivaling that of the "million dollar hair tonic" plot.

Mrs. Willebrandt is the assistant in charge of prohibition prosecutions in the attorney general's department.

According to the unverified story Mrs. Willebrandt is on the trail of a new conspiracy reaching into high enforcement offices of the state. Two federal deputies are said to have gone to Columbus with warrants for the arrest of wealthy or influential suspects.

Mrs. Willebrandt was accompanied to Cleveland by Oliver E. Pagan, indictment expert, and W. W. Grimes, assistant chief of the department of justice.

The rumored conspiracy is said to center about the illegal withdrawal of liquor from government warehouses thru fraudulent permits.

In addition to the agents sent to Columbus department of justice representatives also are believed to be in Canton and Youngstown rounding up the conspirators.

Joseph H. Shure, of Akron, was arrested on a federal warrant when he reported to the district attorney's office today as a witness before the federal grand jury. He is charged with conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition amendment.

Additional credence was placed in the theory that a big plot reaching into official circles is about to be revealed when the first witness before the grand jury turned out to be H. M. Paul, assistant federal director for Ohio, in charge of liquor permits.

Precaution for secrecy that never has been noted before in government investigations is attending each step of the probe.

Only thru close consideration of the personnel of those entering and leaving the district attorney's office was the least hint gained at what the probe is aimed.

Bulky masses of correspondence and government files relating to the Armand case were transferred by great armfuls into the district attorney's office for the consideration by the experts. Messengers hastened out from time to time, returning with persons who had been called in for questioning.

Each person on the "inside" refused to give any information as to what was transpiring in the inner office.

The Armand conspiracy, about which all indications point the investigation is centered, concerns the withdrawal from the Hayner distillery at Troy, Ohio, of 7432 cases of "Old Hayner" bonded whisky. At the time of the expose, distillery officials claimed they had on file in their office withdrawal permits for "every drop" of the liquor.

At least a score of forthwith subpoenas for witnesses ranging from prominent politicians to lesser lights, in addition to several prisoners in workhouses, were reported to be in the hands of marshals. One man said to have been summoned was reported to be named "Joyce" who is declared to hold a position of authority at the Dayton workhouse.

Questioned by reporters he declared "I'm sorry, but I guess you have the wrong man. I am a secret service man from the southern part of the country."

From Columbus came word that a federal prohibition agent there was under surveillance by deputy marshals. Two other Columbus men, one a broker, likewise were under surveillance and may be taken in charge at any moment.

Subpoenas for the United States grand jury at Cleveland were served upon Jim Garland, Austintown, former proprietor of a cafe in Youngstown and upon John Carrothers, of Warren.

TWO BANDITS TOOK JEWELS FROM WOMAN

Victim Wife of Picture Producer—Gems Worth $15,000.

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 19.—(U. P.)—Jewels valued at $15,000 were stripped from the young wife of E. M. Asher, motion picture producer, by two bandits who had forced entrance to the Asher home, police were notified early today.

Mrs. Asher had just returned to the house, first reports said, when she was attacked by the gun men and the jewelry torn from her hands and throat.

Hollywood and Los Angeles police immediately began a search for the bandits. Descriptions of the gems were sent to nearby cities.

Asher is a producer of pictures starring Corinne Griffith.

REV. T. L. SETTLE

Rev. T. L. Settle, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd of Lexington, Ky., whose defense of the pari-mutuel betting won for him a $12,000 residence and a $350,000 church. The gifts were made by grateful horsemen and the campaign for the funds was conducted at the various race tracks.

Parliament Building in London Crumbling Away

London.—Following the discovery that the dome of St. Paul's cathedral is in danger of collapsing, it has been found that the house of parliament is crumbling away. Parliament is not unsafe structurally, but the stone of which it is built is unsuitable for the London climate and all the ornaments are fast disappearing.

Police Medal Given Clever Boy

Julius Cohen, thirteen-year-old St. Louis youth, receiving a police gold medal for his rare judgment and courage in causing the arrest of a band of negro burglars. The youth saw the men leaving a building and suspected them of burglary. He boarded a street car with them, stopped the car outside of a police station, summoned the police and caused their arrest.

APPLICANTS OF PICKAWAY ARE HIGHEST

Four From Circleville Among Five Highest for Highway Jobs.

Pickaway county applicants for positions in the state highway department as inspectors far outclassed those from Franklin, Madison and Fayette counties in the recent examination of the state civil service commission.

In certifying the result of the examination, the state civil service commission showed that the sixth district made up of the above named four Circleville residents were among the five highest in the test.

The result in the order of their standing was: Fred N. Brown, Circleville; Carl E. Allen, Columbus, and John S. Neff, Harry E. Montelius and William M. Reid, Circleville.

Certification was made to the state highway department where appointments are made. More than 25 passed the test in the Sixth district and with work well under way, all are practically sure of employment.

DISAPPOINTED LOVER TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—(U. P.)—Somewhere in the student body of Northwestern University here, authorities today hoped to find a co-ed and a young man who they believe can throw some light on the death of John Minahan Jr., who committed suicide at Milwaukee as a climax to disappointment in love.

Young Minahan's body was identified by his father, Dr. John R. Minahan, prominent physician at Green Bay, Wis., who hastened to Milwaukee when he heard "an unidentified youth had been found dead."

Cleveland, O., Feb. 20.—The record high of October, 1924, was equaled today when medium hogs sold for $12.00 county.

FRED HARTMAN DEAD.

Fred, young son of Grover A. and Louise Kibler Hartman, died Thursday at their home on the Ridge, Fairfield county after a two weeks' illness of double pneumonia. The child was born October 21, 1924. The parents, three brothers and one sister survive. Funeral services were conducted at the late home Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, interment will be in Dutch Hollow cemetery.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Miss Lucy Leist, of Royalton, was brought to the home of her brother, Dr. G. G. Leist, in this city Tuesday, February 17, for treatment. Miss Leist had a fall recently and seriously injured her right shoulder blade.

SERIOUSLY ILL

Mrs. John Roll of Kingston, a sister of Miss Juanita Merriman, of this city, is seriously ill. She took a sudden turn for the worse this morning.

CHILlicothe EXPERIENCES BLUE SUNDAY

Ministerial Alliance Threatens to Extend Operation Over County.

Chillicothe, O., Feb. 21.—(UP.) Chillicothe prepared today for its first deep blue Sunday.

With many of their old-time drastic provisions the Ohio blue laws will go into effect at midnight.

The clamping down of the lid results from the recent prosecution of moving picture operators for operating on Sunday and the court's ruling that such performances were without benefit of the law's sanction.

A thoroughly logical man, Mayor A. P. Minshall reasoned from this ruling that if the movies must close then so must other business houses.

Ergo, if you come to Chillicothe on the morrow, you may buy a meal, if you have a prescription the druggists will fill it for you or if your automobile breaks down the garage man may come out and haul you in. But unless you are a subscriber you can't get a Sunday paper and the soda fountains the shining parlors and other such Sunday "amusements" will be closed.

The ministerial alliance threatens to extend the blueness to the entire county.

THURSTON CENTRALIZED BASKETBALL PLAYERS LOSE

Stoutsville Won Girls' and Boys' Game Friday, the Former by 39 to 4 and the Latter by 23 to 11—Fairfield County Tournament Begins Friday Morning, February 27.

Stoutsville won two games from Thurston Friday night. The girls winning by a score of 39-4; the boys by a 23-11 score. Lynch, of Circleville boys referee. Miss Bostwick, Columbus, girls referee.

The Stoutsville girls are expected to be runners up in the county tournament which begins Friday morning at Lancaster.

The Fairfield county tournament will begin Friday morning at 8 a. m., Eastern time. Games will be played thruout the day and a high school banquet will be held in the evening.

Games will be resumed all day Saturday and the finals will be played on the following Thursday evening. Bremen is touted to win the boys' championship while Liberty Union and Stoutsville girls are expected to battle for girls' honors.

MARRIED IN LONDON.

A marriage license was issued by Judge Tina K. Strayer in probate court here on Wednesday to J. S. Baer of Circleville and Elizabeth Coleman, of Mt. Sterling. Rev. C. W. Smith of the London M. E. church was given as the officiating minister. — Madison County Press.

Mr. and Mrs. Baer have gone to housekeeping in the Mrs. Mabel Nothstine flat on West Main street which they recently furnished.

TAX VALUES OF UTILITIES IN THE STATE.

Columbus, Feb. 19.—(U. P.)—The tax valuation of Ohio public utilities has been boosted $75,722,530 since a year ago, according to figures announced today by the state tax commission.

The total 1924 valuation on which the companies will pay taxes this year is $1,484,450,690 as compared with $1,408,728,070 a year ago.

CIRCLEVILLE HI SCORES

In the game of basketball between Greenville and Circleville high schools in this city Friday evening, the local team won by the score of 12 to 9.

COUNTESS OF SEAFIELD

The Countess of Seafield, nineteen years old, only child of late earl of Seafield, peeress in her own right and heiress of $30,000,000 besides the vast estates of her late father which yield an income of $1,000,000 a year, is said to be the choice of Queen Marie of Rumania as the bride of her younger son, Prince Nicholas. The prince is a sub-lieutenant in the British navy.

SMALL BOY KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Howard Groves Ran in Front of Car of Mayor Neff, of Mt. Sterling.

While on the way to London Wednesday afternoon, Mayor C. M. Neff met four small boys on their way home from school near Chrisman chapel. The boys were playing along the roadside and just as the car was passing, one of the boys, Howard Groves, son of Mr. Ott Groves, darted away from his playmates and ran against the right fore fender of the auto and was thrown to the ground. The mayor immediately stopped and with the assistance of a milk truck driver, took the little fellow into London for medical attention. Upon arriving at the doctor's office he passed away. Mr. Neff says he does not want any more thrilling accidents of this kind. No blame can be laid on the mayor as he was not aware that the boy was going to run towards him. — Mt. Sterling Tribune.

ONLY SON SUCCUMBS TO MENINGITIS.

A death of extreme sadness occurred in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Corkwell at the home in Mt. Sterling, Monday evening, February 16, when their only son, Charles McClimans Corkwell, passed away from an attack of spinal meningitis. The lad was two years, six months and five days old at the time of his death. In addition to the parents, three young sisters survive.

On account of the contagious character of the disease with which the child was afflicted, no funeral service was held at the home. A brief service was held in Pleasant cemetery on Wednesday morning. — Mt. Sterling Tribune.

Tiffin, O., Feb. 21.—Decision was reserved following a hearing before the public utilities commission at Columbus today on the application of the Pennsylvania railroad for authority to abandon its station at Rockaway in Seneca county. The railroad says receipts do not justify the expenditure.

Successful Life

The following statement made by H. G. Wells in an article in the American Magazine is considered by many as the most practical definition of a successful life: "Wealth, notoriety, place and power are no measure of success whatever. The only true measure of success is the ratio between what we might have been and what we might have done, on the one hand, and the thing we have done and the thing we have made of ourselves, on the other."—Washington Star.

Hobby of Real Value

The person who has no hobby always reminds me of a hen without a gravel heap to scratch on—he has little to do in his spare moments but mope about. Now, this is not good for anyone. Give a hen a bit of gravel to scratch among and it is pleasantly occupied, so with the person who goes in for a hobby, let it be what it may.—Arthur Sharp in the Edinburgh Scotsman.

Of Biblical Derivation

The expression "feet of clay" refers to the earthly or baser part of human nature. If a person appears to be far above others that he or she is like a god or goddess, often some grave fault will be observed to remind others that the hero or heroine is still mortal. The expression is derived from Biblical usage; see Daniel II, verse 33.

Man-Made Diamonds

The geological survey says that diamonds were made by Moissan by the sudden chilling of molten iron containing dissolved carbon. They have also been made by another process involving simultaneous action of high temperature and pressure. Diamonds are not made extensively, as the large stones are imperfect.

Mammoth Magnifier

A scientist has succeeded, by the use of ultra-violet light and a dark background, in making a photo-micrograph with a magnification of 25,000 diameters. On this scale a lawn tennis ball would appear a mile and a half in diameter, and a pin's head would appear to measure 40 yards across.

Herring Gull Flies Far

The herring gull's range is wide. Every harbor along the South Atlantic coast has its flocks, and the birds find a living in the Gulf of Mexico and about the lakes and rivers of the interior. One might say that wherever the waters offer food there the herring gull will be found.

Bestowed in Derision

The sobriquet "Nutmeg State" is conferred upon the state of Connecticut, the shrewd inhabitants of which were once jocosely charged with manufacturing cedar nutmegs, in imitation of the genuine article, and palming them off on unsuspecting customers.—Kansas City Star.

First United States Bank

The first bank in the United States was the Bank of North America, in Philadelphia. It was chartered by the Continental congress on December 31, 1781. As originally established it was the idea of Robert Morris. This bank is still in existence.

Thrift Is Independence

To safeguard your future, secure independence and make real headway in the world, save money. Heed this, for it is the truth; and in this truth and the way you use it lies the success or failure of your life.—Homer LaSalle.

Coal Used Centuries Ago

Coal was worked in Scotland for the first time in the year 1200, but was not actually mined until 1243. It was not popular, however, until the use of chimneys began to increase.

Tea Made Harmful.

Tea, "the cup that cheers but does not inebriate," must in fact also be reckoned among the very serious and deleterious intoxicants, though of course only when grossly misused. In Ireland especially, and also in the United States, there are many persons addicted to the excessive drinking of tea which is not brewed as it should be, but is permitted to steep and soak for hours and even for days, until some very harmful ingredients are extracted from the leaves, the effects of which upon the nerves and brain are in the end disastrous. There are thousands of occupants of insane asylums whose minds were wrecked by such indulgence.—Exchange.

Awaits Reclamation.
The southern swamp lands have grown, rather than diminished, in area since the Civil war, because of the decay of rice growing. Many old rice fields have now fallen under the dominion of the swamp. But the bulk of this swamp country has always been wild although the adjacent uplands have been cultivated since colonial days. The swamps have always been a region of romance and legend. They have sheltered pirates and smugglers, panthers and bears and strange wild animals from foreign lands escaped off stranded vessels. No private citizen or organization has ever had the strength or courage to try to conquer them. Here and there a dent has been made in the edge—nothing more. The placing of these wild lands under the rule of the plow, like the conquest of the western desert, is a task for the whole strength of the nation.

The Day of Judgment.
The world has taken to rolling so rapidly of late that the most interesting things occur and are finished up and forgotten before we have time to observe and remember them. Great events flash by, like country stations seen from the last platform of an express train. Unless we stand ready, as the astronomers do, before an eclipse of the sun, we may find ourselves in a new epoch without having obtained even a kodak snapshot of the Day of Judgment.—John Jay Chapman.

Descendant of Washington Line Dwells in This Austrian Castle

The castle of George Baron von Washington, of Austria, the descendant of the Washington line and the bearer of the same name as his illustrious American relative.

Blood Relative of First President

George Baron von Washington Is Distinguished Austrian Citizen.

The most distinguished kinsman and namesake of George Washington, our first President, lives in Europe. He is George Baron von Washington, of Poels, who was a captain of Austrian cavalry and fought against America in the World war. The Baron is sixty-seven years old and lives alone, with his seven dogs, in an enormous shabby castle in Styria, southern Austria.

Nine hundred years ago, the baron says, there was a Torlin, lord of Ravensworth, England, from whom the Washingtons descended. From Torlin to Robert Washington, lord of Millebourne, in 1400, the family trees of George and the baron were the same. Robert Washington married the daughter of Lord Kerneford and had several sons. One was Robert, Jr., whose sons emigrated to America. One of these great-grandsons of Robert was the great-grandfather of George Washington who became first President of the United States.

John, another son of Robert Washington, and his descendants lived in England until the end of the Eighteenth century when they emigrated, but not to America. James Washington, descendant of John, went to The Hague and sold his services where he could as an officer. In 1790 he learned that a Washington had become President of the American republic, and after investigating found that George was his true blood cousin. James then tried to get a job in America and letters were exchanged between the two. The baron has no copy of his great-grandfather's letter but he does have the original of the answer our President sent refusing James a military post in the new republic. George's reason for the refusal and plain dealing as stated in the letter was that "it was not in accord with the policy of the American government to bestow offices of any kind on foreigners to the exclusion of her own citizens." However, he admitted his blood relationship to James.

Americans who are interested in the family tree of George Washington, and most Americans are, will be interested in this photograph taken recently in Austria of George Baron von Washington, the Austrian descendant of the Washington line and the bearer of the same name as his illustrious American relative.

Later we learn that James Washington also made a name and position in life for himself, and his son Jacob an even greater one. Jacob sold his services to the Bavarian government under King Ludwig I, and finally became marshal of the court. He became a baron and lord of the estate at Notzing, Upper Bavaria. Jacob's only son, Maximilian, the present baron's father, carried the family career still further by marrying a royal duchess—a cousin to Queen Mary of England. Now the baron is the last of his line, his brother having died.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Washington

Through seven slow years of unad-vancing war,
Equal when fields were lost or fields were won,
With breath of popular applause or blame,
Nor fanned nor damped, unquenchably worn
Too inward to be reached by flaws of idle fame.

Soldier and statesman, rarest of unison;
High-poised example of great duties done,
Simply as breathing, a world's honors worn
As life's indifferent gifts to all men born;
Dumb for himself, unless it were to God,
But for his barefoot soldiers eloquent,
Trampling the snow to coral where they trod,
Held by his awe in hollow-eyed content;
Modest, yet firm as Nature's self; un-blamed
Save by the men his nobler temper shamed;
Not honored then or now because he wooed
The popular voice, but that he still withstood;
Broad-minded, higher-souled, there is but one
Who was all this, and ours, and all men's—
WASHINGTON!

Old Chronicle Tells of Washington as Fireman

George Washington was once a fireman, says the Detroit News. At least he presented the volunteer company of Alexandria, Va., with a fire engine. M. B. Levick, writing in St. Nicholas, describes this incident in the life of the father of our country as follows:
"Washington presented the engine in 1775 to the Friendship fire company. That was almost a hundred years before there were paid firemen. In those days the fire fighting was done by volunteers, who belonged to different companies, just as it is today in small towns. When a fire was discovered a big bell was rung and at the signal the members of the volunteer company came running from wherever they were; they hauled out the engine and dragged it, with a score of men tugging at a long rope, to the fire, and then fell to work for all they were worth, making the pump handles go up and down like a seesaw. The Friendship fire company was organized on August 13, 1774, the year before Washington bought the engine for it, and is still in existence, although now Alexandria has a paid fire department. The engine is there yet, and on special occasions it is brought out by the Friendship Veterans' Fire association."

SAID BY WASHINGTON

A good moral character is the first essential in a man.
I feel everything that hurts the sensibility of a gentleman.
I hope, some day, we shall become a storehouse and granary for the world.
We do not wish to be the only people to taste the sweets of an equal and good government.
Would to God the harmony of nations were an object that lay nearest to the hearts of sovereigns!
I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that "honesty is the best policy."
It appears to me that little more than common sense and common honesty would be necessary to make us a great and happy nation.
I am resolved that no misrepresentations, falsehoods, or calumny shall make me swerve from what I conceive to be the strict line of duty.
The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

Old Pohick Church

Not far from Alexandria, Va., is a church of which one hears less than of some of the other churches in which the first President worshipped. This is the old Pohick church, of which, it is claimed, Washington was the designer. He also was a vestryman of this church, and it is known that he had a great and peculiar affection for it. It is a church having much to do with the spiritual life of Washington.

Pushfulness Wins.
It is always easy to be wasteful of our best gifts, owing to either laziness or timidity. Pushfulness never does this; it is ready to use its strength to the last ounce and to leave no stone unturned that may lead to attainment. It is the making of success in art or literature just as truly as in business. Allied to it we find industry and indomitable purpose, which are both fine things, especially when finely used. It is as inevitable as it is just and fair that purpose and unceasing energy should achieve and accomplish; it is as inevitable as it is just that laziness, slackness, inertia should remain sterile and stultified.

Wise Conservatism.
Cultivate a just moderation. Learn to reconcile order with change, stability with progress. This is a wise conservatism; this is a wise reform. Rightly understanding these terms, who would not be a conservative? Who would not be a reformer? A conservative of all that is good; a reformer of all that is evil; a conservative of knowledge; . . . a conservative of that divine order which is found only in movement; a reformer of those earthly wrongs and abuses which spring from a violation of the great law of human progress.—Charles Sumner.

AVOIDING TEMPTATION.

I never see an apple pie
But what I'd like to eat it;
I never see a carpet up
But what I'd like to beat it;
I never see a sloppy street
But what I'd like to dry it;
But since I don't like work, I shut
My eyes,—and hurry by it!

Perhaps You Have Heard Them.

Harold had often heard the poem, "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." Last summer we visited Aunt Louise, who lived in the country. In the evening we would all sit on the porch, and, of course, hear all the night noises, such as frogs, crickets, etc. One evening Harold sat gazing intently at the sky for some time, then, suddenly looking at his mother, he exclaimed, "Mother, just hear the stars twinkle."—Chicago American.

ONCE OVERS

(By J. J. Mundy.)

Misfortune Is the Real Test of Friendship.

How about that friend who has met with hard luck? Are you as friendly with him as formerly?

You have offered him sympathy, 'tis true, but you are gradually drawing away?

He did not need you when all was fair sailing, but how about now?

Don't be so afraid that he will ask financial aid. If you are a real friend you will not wait for him to ask.

One of the hardest things about reverses is the aloofness of your supposed friends.

You know, perhaps, of some men who have dropped from your social calendar because they cannot keep up the pace with you.

You are not particularly interested in hearing from them.

But how much bigger you would be, how much more of a man you might consider yourself if you would stand by them during their trouble, at least to the extent of being as friendly as you were in the more prosperous days.

Many a loss becomes permanent due to discouragement.

You might, by your cheering spirit of helpfulness turn the tide.—Copy-right.

ANTI-STREAM POLLUTION BILL READY FOR ACTION

House Health Committee Reports Legislation Out—Mine Operators At Hearing.

Columbus, Feb. 20.—The way was paved Thursday for the passage by the lower house of the Davidson anti-stream pollution bill, providing for regulation of stream pollution and contamination by the state department of health. The house health committee reported the bill out and recommended its passage with an amendment giving municipalities a limited home rule in pollution matters where they already have adequate pollution ordinances.

Action of the committee followed another public hearing on the measure in which representatives of the southern Ohio coal companies complained that the coal industry in the state would be forced to suspend operations if they had to install devices to purify mine water. The chief concern of the mine operators was that the pending measure is a "fish and game" measure and that their streams would have to be purified so fish life could exist in them.

They were assured that the measure was purely a health proposal and that so long as the mine water did not become a menace to public health their mines would not be affected.

The measure gives the public health council the right to approve and regulate plans for purification of water containing industrial waste and sewage and to classify streams for the purpose of eradicating existing pollution, which is menacing the public health.

PISTOLS AND DRUGS

The revolver traffic is the greatest unrestricted menace to the people of the United States and their safety. Why it should be so is a mystery. Not a police official but realizes that his work and his danger would be more than halved were the traffic eliminated. And all recognize that such laws as that of New York state are weakly palliative. All insist that what is needed is stoppage at the source. Undoubtedly a man with homicidal intent might find other means to his end, but the other means usually give the victims a greater and more sporting chance.

The police are fully aware of the two arch enemies to their labors, and they will frankly tell you that either is tremendously dangerous, but there is no hesitation in their asseveration that the combination of the two is responsible for so many deaths per annum that the people of this land of liberty have cause for shame. The twin abominations are pistols and drugs. The deaths from this evil combination would have wiped out an entire army corps since the war began.

It may be argued that if the crooks illegally possess and carry revolvers it is but fair that the ordinary citizen carrying a gun in conflict with the crook also so equipped are so numerous that much fear has been introduced into the heart of the crook. The result, one must admit, has been that usually the citizen's firearm is removed from him and goes to enrich the armament of crookdom.—Robert Shirley in January Police Magazine.

History.

The stories of Alexander and Caesar, further than they instruct us in the art of living well, and furnish us with observations of wisdom and prudence, are not one whit to be preferred to the history of Robin Hood, or the Seven Wise Masters. I do not deny but history is very useful, and very instructive of human life; but if it be studied only for the reputation of being a historian, it is a very empty thing; and he that can tell all the particulars of Herodotus and Plutarch, Curtius and Livy, without making any other use of them, may be an ignorant man with a good memory, and with all his pains, hath only filled his head with Christmas tales.—John Locke.

STEVENSON'S

STORMY PETREL OF BRITTANY

Douarnenez Is Waving Red Flag in Face of Republic of France.

Washington, D. C.—Douarnenez is running true to form. Newspapers say the town is waving the red flag in the face of the republic of France, but the Bretons have been known to display the same restive spirit at various times in the past, according to a bulletin from Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Though the Bretons, in the heart of whose homeland so many of the American dough boys landed when they disembarked at Brest, are peaceful and home-loving, they have sometimes rebelled. In the Fifth century a brother-in-law of Duke Francis II wrote his kinsman: 'Monsieur, I declare to God, I would rather be the ruler of a million of wild boars than of such a people as are your Bretons.'

People Pious and Seafaring.

"The cursory traveler would not suspect the sleepy little village, whose fishing smacks with their red and brown sails and blue and brown fish nets make its waterfront a happy haunt of artists of all nationalities, of being susceptible to emotional outbursts. But the relentless fight which these men must put up against the hungry, dangerous waters of the ocean have given them a lively but melancholy imagination, obstinate determination, and a piety as distinguished as their bravery.

"In those early days the little seaside towns with their counts and other dignitaries, sometimes as important as bishops, like those of Rouen, or even their dukes like those of Nantes, had more individuality than they boast today. But Douarnenez, with about 15,000 people, is one of the most active of the sardine fishing centers along the Breton coast.

"Its location is ideal—on a beautiful blue bay nicked out of the westernmost peninsula along the French coast, with a snug little harbor of its own called Port de Rosmeur behind the mole of which the small sailboats go for shelter. And the Breton men will tell you 'I like my boat better with my sail and my arms for motors.'

"About 30,000 religious enthusiasts rub elbows in the Douarnenez streets with artists and natives during the latter part of August of each year, for the last Sunday in the month is the Pardon of Sainte Anne-la-Palud. The various 'Pardons' of Brittany—festivals during which indulgences are granted—and the numerous wayside shrines have combined to give this portion of France, which is at the same time both patriotic and alien, the sobriquet of 'The Land of Calvaries and Pardons.'

"In this day of the world-wide use of the plain business suit and standardized dress for American and European women, the customs and costumes of Brittany, like those of the Island of Marken in the Netherlands, give an opera bouffe effect, which the gorgeous sunsets, the wild seas, the rock-bound shores, and the great mountains and plains dotted with menhirs only accentuate.

Legend Embodied in Opera.
"The intensity of the land and the people is at once so evident that Lalo immediately saw in its legends the basis for his opera, 'Le Roi d'Ys.' The story goes that King Gradlon of that ancient wicked city of Ys, which stood on the shores of the Bay of Douarnenez, had a beautiful daughter who was the wickedest person in the city. The king had been warned by his councillor, St. Corentin of Quimper, but one night while her father slept Dahut stole from around his neck the gold key which unlocked the gates of the dykes and locks of Ys and gave it to one of her lovers. Shortly afterwards torrents of water flooded the city; the king took his daughter on the saddle behind him and fled, but a voice commanded him that she must be left behind. The king alone escaped, the city and all its inhabitants being submerged beneath the waters of the Bay of Douarnenez.

"Douarnenez means literally, the land of the isle, from the Ile Tristan just off the coast, named for the valiant Tristan of Leonais, one of the knights of the Round Table. Once the island's interest was religious, but now it is commercial; since the old days its priory has been superseded by a lighthouse and a sardine factory.

"Concarneau and Douarnenez are the Gloucester, Mass., and the Rockport, Maine, of the French coast, each vying with the other for the importance of being the best-known fishing center."

"For the connoisseur nothing rivals the Brittany sardine, which is so simply prepared for market that it is a wonder that some other people have not captured and standardized the product. The 'corporal's stripes,' or the 'cavalry corporals,' as the little fishes are called in France, are packed in the familiar tin boxes, heated oil is poured over them, the boxes are soldered and then boiled for about an hour, and the harvest of the sea is ready for the discriminating epicures of the world."

Needle in Knee

Warren, Ohio.—William Sadler, ten, of Newton Falls, was taken to the City hospital recently with a needle lodged in his knee. The needle was removed by a slight operation. It had entered the knee while the boy was an infant.

AMUSEMENTS

"Dynamite Smith," shown for the first time yesterday at the Met theater is a story so big, powerful and gripping that it lifts you out of yourself and sweeps you into a tumult of emotions. You laugh and cry, gasp and thrill. You know terror and pity, cowardice and bravery, love and vengeance. It is an emotional explosion. No human being can see this poignant drama and not be moved by its mighty heart appeal.

Ray is always in tune with his characterization. The timid Smith, even when he is his cowardliest, is made real, human, pitiful, loveable by Ray. Smith is a shy, retiring young man who hasn't the heart to refuse the help a girl who wanted to escape from the brutality of her husband. Sacrificing himself, he takes her to Alaska, and when she dies he takes care of her baby. Even when the child's father shows up and terrorizes Smith with his brutality, his tortures and his threats, he takes care of the baby.

"Dynamite Smith," as written by C. Gardner Sullivan and directed by Ralph Ince, starts out dramatically and ends up melodramatically with a great thrill that makes the audience gasp and then sigh contentedly, for there is a happy ending with Smith marrying the pretty Kitty Gray and the baby playing "best man."

Frederic Arnold Kummer wrote a tremendously popular novel "Plaster Saints" that Murray W. Garsson has produced on the screen under the title of "The Spitfire." In addition to putting a "best seller" on the silver sheet Mr. Garsson has invested it with one of the biggest all star casts ever assembled for one picture. The picture array of talent includes Betty Blythe, Lowell Sherman, Elliott Dexter, Pauline Garon, Robert Warwick and Burr McIntosh.

"Plaster Saints" was absorbing as a book. As a big picture it is even more thrilling and exciting. It is a human story, vividly picturing today's life in the big cities.

Into the turmoil enters Jean Bronson, unsophisticated, yet possessed of beauty, talent and a goodly share of the worldly goods—money. But the path of happiness is not free of thorns. Old Carrington, her millionaire grandfather, cuts her off; her home is closed to her. Why? Because she saw fit to be honest with the man she loved, a handsome, athletic young man named Douglas Kenyon.

In quick succession there follows a series of twists and turns to this thriller that enmesh the principal characters and sends both thru some perilous experiences.

"The Spitfire" has a hero made of sterner stuff an alert fighting active chap who overcomes all kinds of odds in his battle to win the beautiful Jean. Miss Blythe appears as Jean while Mr. Dexter plays the role of Kenyon. At the Met theater Monday.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The E. L. C. E. of the Evangelical church was entertained at the parsonage for the February business meeting. In the absence of the president and vice president the service was in charge of Miss Goldie Noggle. After devotionals the business for the month was transacted. The hostess served dainty refreshments and a very enjoyable social hour was spent together.

Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Tovey entertained the W. M. S. of the Evangelical church at the parsonage for the February meeting. The service was in charge of the vice president, Mrs. Ida Compton and Mrs. J. H. Lutz had charge of the devotionals. After the business session Mrs. Leslie Hudnell and Miss Goldie Noggle gave a very interesting Mission study, which was followed by a reading "The Little Missionary World," by Gladys Noggle. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Miss Annette Carothers entertained the Y. P. M. C. of the Evangelical church at her home Thursday evening. Service was in charge of the president Miss Evelyn Imler and was opened by singing, "Mine, Still Mine." The 27th Psalm was read and this was followed by several prayers. After the business Annette Carothers and Frances Kibler gave the Mission study and the hostess served dainty refreshments.

Tomatoes Ranked First in Crops

Nineteen Different Products Had $313,000,000 Gross Value in 1924.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Nineteen truck crops produced in the United States the past year for table use, canning, and manufacture had a gross value to the growers of $313,000,000, according to estimates by the United States Department of Agriculture. This is $12,000,000 less than in 1923, but $22,000,000 more than in 1922, and $78,000,000 more than in 1921.

There has been a rapid expansion in truck crop production, transportation, and marketing in recent years, as indicated in acreage figures, the department points out. The acreage devoted to the 19 crops this year was 2,302,000 acres, which is a 60 per cent increase over the acreage in 1921.

Canning Acreage Doubled.

Production of 18 crops grown wholly or partly for table use direct was of 1,309,000 acres and had a value of 262,000,000. The quantity produced wholly or partly for canning or manufacture was grown on 993,000 acres and had a value of $51,000,000. The canning acreage has been more than doubled since 1921, and the table acreage has been increased one-third.

Tomatoes were first in gross value, showing a total of $55,000,000; early Irish potatoes are valued at $44,000,000; strawberries $35,000,000, and canstoups $20,000,000. Green peas, melons, lettuce, celery, cabbage, and asparagus each come in the $15,000,000 to $17,000,000 range; cucumbers, snap beans and watermelons ranged from $8,500,000 to $12,000,000 each, and sweet corn for canning, spinach, peppers, cauliflower, and carrots, from $3,000,000 to $7,100,000 each. The value of eggplants was $1,030,000.

Tomatoes in the Lead.

Tomatoes had the largest acreage at 170,000 acres; early Irish potatoes, 108,000 acres; sweet corn for canning, 290,000 acres; green peas, 242,000 acres; watermelons, 108,000 acres; strawberries, 147,000 acres; cucumbers, 130,000 acres. These figures do not include market gardens. Ninety-one per cent of the acreage of green peas was for canning; canning and manufacture of cucumbers took 72 per cent of the acreage; tomatoes, 67 per cent; asparagus, 47 per cent; spinach, 29 per cent; string beans, 27 per cent, and cabbage for kraut, 14 per cent.

Truck crops are the product of intensive agriculture and require much human labor, and a highly fertile and well-tilled soil. Gross return per acre is far from being all profit, and sometimes fails to equal the cost of production, the department says.

Sources of Protein and Vitamines for Laying Hen

Skim milk and buttermilk are exceedingly valuable sources of protein and vitamines for laying hens. This has been demonstrated not only by experiment stations, but also by thousands of poultry raisers. While poultrymen generally understand the value of these products, they do not always use enough of them to get the best results obtainable. Too many think that if they feed some milk or some buttermilk in addition to the regular mash and grain ration, they are doing all that is necessary. This, of course, may not be true. Feeding "some" of these dairy products may not be enough to properly balance the ration.

It has been shown that an ordinary mash made of ground corn, ground oats, bran, and shorts, when supplemented with whole corn and oats, make a good laying ration when the hens are given all the buttermilk or skim milk they can consume. That is, when they are given no water. If they have access to water in addition to skim milk or buttermilk, they will not consume enough of the latter to balance the ration mentioned, and therein lies the mistake that so many poultrymen make. They do not feed enough of the skim milk or buttermilk to furnish the amount of protein needed for high production.

Increase of Roup

Although roup is an all-year-round disease, the worst epidemics come with the shifting weather conditions of fall and spring. The disease causes considerable loss and appears to be increasing from year to year. The true roup includes colds, bronchitis, catarrh, canker, diphtheria, roup proper, and perhaps chicken pox. It usually comes with colds which start when the birds have been exposed to dampness, drafts and chill.

The Strawberry Patch

Very few gardeners who have space to spare will do without a strawberry patch. The everbearing variety has come into favor, and in most instances is satisfactory. However, the crop, being continuous throughout most of the growing season, is seldom as large at any time as the regular kind. Better results will be had by pinching off the blossoms until June.

Rice Is Not Relished

Rice is not liked by poultry, and it ranks lower than wheat in both digestibility and palatability. It is not much used for poultry feeding, even in the South where rice is grown. Some commercial chick scratch grain mixtures contain a little rice, but it does not add to the value of the feed.

Savages Use Tooth Brushes.

The manufacturer of a popular dental powder advertises that "Savages lead a different kind of life from us, and therefore nature takes care of their teeth without artificial help." Wellerburn, the wanderer in remote places, saw this and laughed. "I know of at least three African tribes," he said, "that brush their teeth regularly. Each person carries a twig of a certain fibrous tree. They chew the end of it into a good bunch of bristles, and spend a quarter-hour each morning cleaning their teeth thoroughly. They tie a string to the twig and dangle it from the waist cord, if they have no other clothes to fasten it on. It is an important thing to them."

Said Tract appraised at $37,500.00.

Parcels 2, 3, 4 and 5.
These four parcels combined form a tract of land on South Court Street in the City of Circleville, Ohio, upon which stands one of the largest, best equipped and most modern Flour and Meal Mills to be found in the State. The buildings being of brick and concrete construction and equipped with most modern and improved machinery, the Mill Office being No. 901 South Court Street, Circleville, Ohio. This Tract is formerly known with the Crites Mill and has a capacity of 250 barrels of Flour and 800 barrels of Corn per day and a storage capacity of 100,000 bushels of grain and is equipped with a very large modern McDaniel's Grain Dryer.

Said Tract, including the good-will of said "Crites Mill" all appraised at $15,000.00.

Each said mill is situated in Pickaway County, Ohio, and for a more pertinent and specific description of said Properties reference is hereby made to the Application to sell said Properties filed by the Receivers herein in the office of the County Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas of Pickaway County, Ohio.

The sale of these properties and each of them, will include all fixtures, plants, buildings, structures and Trade Fixtures now erected upon or attached to any of the said several Parcels of Real Estate respectively, together with the good-will of the several properties respectively.
Said Properties will be offered for sale separately and must be sold for cash, or one-half (1-2) of the purchase price in cash and secure the remainder of the purchase price to be due in one year from date of sale and to be secured by a First Mortgage upon the Real Estate purchased at the option of the purchaser. Deferred payments where so sold, shall bear interest at the rate of six (6%) per cent per annum, interest payable semi-annually with a further condition, that in the event that any purchaser makes default in the payment of any installment of interest when due, that portion of the purchase price remaining unpaid, together with all interest thereon, shall at once become due and payable.

In all sales where the purchaser elects to pay one-half (1-2) of the purchase price in cash and secure the remainder of the purchase price by payment of the remainder by Mortgage upon the Real Estate, said sale is upon the further condition, that said purchaser shall keep the Buildings, Equipment and Machinery insured in some good solvent incorporate company or companies operating in the State of Ohio, against fire, cyclone and windstorm and in an amount not less than the amount of the deferred payments, said insurance to be for the benefit of and payable to Charles Gerhardt and Edwin C. Wright, Receivers for The Dixie Mills Company, or their successors or assigns.

The Head Start
By FAIRFAX DOWNEY

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

TRAINER JAKE JONES, whose eyes resembled hard-boiled eggs, fixed them on Stickney McVey, giving that youth an uncomfortable sensation, as if he had eaten too much at a picnic.

"I've done right by you, Stick," declared Trainer Jake. "I've worked hard and earned on you. You got the stride of a runner. But, Judas Priest! you ain't got a getaway. Every time you get left at the post."

"The meet tomorrow with Clay is about the last chance I give you. Try and jump the gun—just once. If you try that, you may start on time after all."

And with that nasty dig, Trainer Jake took himself away.

That night Stickney McVey awoke from a sound sleep to find his bed surrounded by sinister figures in the robes and cowls of monks. By their insignia, he knew he was the recipient of a visitation from that fraternity, an honor highly coveted at Enfield college.

The boy in bed broke the silence with, "Kind of late, aren't you?"

"Latency is not inappropriate in a visit to you," the spokesman declared, and in his words there seemed to be malice aforethought.

Then the hooded figures spoke in unison: "Rise, base worm; gird thyself and come forth to trial by combat, boiling in oil, and other ordeals to test if thou be worthy."

"Say, you better let me off tonight," Stickney protested. "I'm in training, you know. Meet with Clay tomorrow. Got to run the hundred."

"The neophyte seems to think," sneered the leader, "that his presence in the meet will make some difference. We had not noticed that it had in the past. We come now to take over your training."

That night Stick McVey ran as he never ran before and hoped never to run again. The event he ran was the gauntlet. Four strong-armed Mu Nus were at the start of every sprint, when Stick crouched for the start. Being equipped with paddles, they insured the continuation of the impulse, and at the finish were more brethren who indulged in slaps of congratulation. Finally the initiate did a fast sprint to his room, locked and barricaded the door and composed his weary, smarting body to slumber.

It was so funny that even the crowds in the Enfield stands had to laugh when their star pole vaulter's pole snapped just as he was clearing what would have been the winning height. The ludicrous fashion with which he crashed through the bamboo cross bar and the surprised expression on his face when he lit suddenly in the pit were comical indeed. But when that event gave a margin of points to the rival Clay team, the debacle lost its power to amuse.

Stick McVey, stepping none too sprightly toward the starting point of the 100-yard dash, felt many a pair of eyes on him. He winced, for he realized that now his college's hopes of victory rested largely on him. He'd jump that gun, he would. What did he care if the starter called them all back? It would show 'em he wasn't going to be late this time. No more trailing and finishing fourth for him.

And then as he dug his spikes in the starting holes, Stick knew with a horrible certainty that he was not going to be able to jump the gun, not even with the grueling training the Mu Nus had administered the night before to put fighting spirit in him. Long-formed habit was too strong. He knew in his heart that just as he was deciding to beat the starter's gun by a split second, the darn thing would go off and he would lurch forward too late, in the dust of the field.

Before he started he was a beaten man.

"Ready!" ordered the starter. Eight runners rose from their haunches and caught their light, sure balances with hands resting on the cinder track.

"Get set!" The crouching bodies of the eight bent forward, every muscle at its utmost tensility and nerves strung tight for the crack of the pistol.

In the bark of that weapon was lost the gentle crack of an air rifle fired from the track house, directly in rear of the starting point. The concealed marksman was Trainer Jake Jones.

Stickney McVey sprang forward as if he had been shot. As a matter of fact, he had been.

He must have covered five yards or so with his first leap and on the sixth he hit his stride. His well-muscled legs pounded up and down like the pistons of a smoothly racing engine.

It was a pretty race, the 100-yard dash the stands saw that day. If only the fleeting, thrilling picture could have been more lasting! The watches caught them at only two-fifths over ten seconds. Chest out, head back, Stick McVey broke the tape, gasping for breath. No Clay college man had better than seen his heels, and it was his own Enfield teammates who had crossed the line at his elbows, taking second and third places and salting away the meet.

When track men in later years, deferring to the respected opinion of Stickney McVey, asked that famous sprinter what had been the secret of his success as a runner, he was wont to display a watch charm containing a tiny BB shot, once extracted from his anatomy. That he would admit, gave him his first real head-start.

Russian Villages Prey of Fire.

The Russian village is built principally of wood and roofed with wood, or with straw and stones. For this reason there are so many fires that, according to statistics, one-fifth of all the peasant cottages burn down every year, or putting it in another way, every house burns down after five years. This seems improbable, but it is reliable information.

Point of Natural History.

Two small boys were awaiting their teacher on the sidewalk. One began to crawl on hands and knees, unmindful of clean white stockings, and was corrected by the other lad, but would not arise, as he said he was a lion. "Lion: don't walk that way," said the second little fellow, "they walk on their foots."

Ice in the Tropics.

In Mexico, when the trains stop at the little stations, the natives frequently come up and offer ice cream for sale. Passengers naturally wonder how they got the ice to make it. The natives appear too poor to buy it, even if there were any there, which there isn't. They learn on inquiry that the makers take the leaf of the cactus plant, which may be a foot and a half or two feet long and hollowed out in form, and fill it with water. These, at night, they suspend well up in the air. In the morning the water has become ice. Then they put the layers together and make a bulk of it. A chemist on one of the trains explained that in the dry atmosphere the rapid evaporation caused the water to freeze, on the same principle that people in hot climates suspend water in jars to cool it.

Dante.

To get a faithful English transcript of the great Florentine we should need a diction of the fourteenth century molded by a more fiery and potent genius than Chaucer. Not the thoughts solely as in every true poem are so often virgin thoughts; the words, too many of them are virgin words. Their freshness and unworn vigor are there alone in Dante's Italian. Of the modern intellectual movement, Dante was the majestic herald. In his poems are the mysterious shadows, the glow, the fragrance, the young life promising splendors of the dawn. The broad day has its strength, and its blessings; but it can give a faint image of the glories of its birth.—George Henry Calvert.

Sarcastic.

"Tomorrow," howled the exasperated manager, after he had seen the ninth packageless patron leave his shop. "I'm going to put a showcase of gold dollars out front, marked down to 90 cents and see if you get rid of few of 'em."—Public Ledger.

LIFE.

If once in your life you have known a friend,
Looked in his eyes and found no guile
With a light heart trail to your journey's end,
There still is gold in your soul to spend,
Life was worth living once in a while.

If once in your life you have reached the rung
Where you aimed on the ladder you climbed that day,
Heard a word of praise from an honest tongue,
As a bird in your heart triumphant sung,
Life was worth living once in a way!

If once in your life you have held a hand,
And garnered love as a dole from it,
The reason for all you will understand
Why the stars were made and the red rose planned,
And find life worth living—the whole of it! —Sydney Mail.

DISTRIBUTE AUTO MONEY

The first distribution of cash to the various municipalities of the state from the state automobile license funds will be made during the next ten days or two weeks.

Just what the amount will be has not yet been determined but it is certain to go well into the millions. In spite of the delay because of the alleged poor finishing of the tags, the sale has been the greatest in the history of Ohio for the first 30 days, and immediate distribution of this money to the cities and villages of the state means that much important road work may start as soon as weather conditions will permit. The first distribution will be larger than the first a year ago, and the second will be even greater and prove a surprise to many small villages which have important highway improvement programs in view for the coming year.

TAG LICENSE REVENUE IN THIS COUNTY

Warrants Will be Mailed Immediately by Secretary of State Brown.

Because of the prompt transfer of money from the sale of automobile license tags for 1925, Secretary of State Thad H. Brown has completed vouchers totalling $3,902,320.34 for distribution to the various county and local taxing subdivisions of the state. Warrants will be mailed immediately to the county auditor of each county for the amounts to which the county is entitled.

Secretary Brown announced the share from this vast sum for Pickaway county. The amounts that were certified for the taxing subdivision of this county are as follows:

County	$11,849 84
Ashville	1,062 71
Circleville	5,729 42
Commercial Point	147 00
Darbyville	108 81
New Holland	429 44
South Bloomfield	120 82
Tarleton	187 88
Williamsport	434 18

Total $20,061 10

Secretary Brown explained that this amount represents only 50 per cent of the total collected from this district. The remaining 50 per cent remains in the state treasury for use by the state highway department for the maintenance and repair of main market roads and inter-county highways.

There has already been deposited by Secretary Brown in the state treasury approximately $8,750,000 derived from the sale of automobile license tags for 1925. The amount to be distributed to the county and local subdivisions represents about three-fifths of the total amount to be distributed for the current year, based on the probable increase in the number of motor vehicles.

Secretary Brown was gratified at the low cost of distributing the tags in Ohio. The cost amounted to only $2.30 for each $100 collected. Included in this amount was the cost of manufacturing the tags. This amount compares favorably with the cost for 1922 which was $3.30 for each $100 collected.

The secretary of state explained that Ohio spends less each year for distribution than any other state of similar population.

WE MEET THE DEMAND OF $25 & $28 Topcoats of Exceptional Value

There is an active demand for a "real" Topcoat at a moderate price—we are meeting it splendidly with a special offering of extraordinary Value at $28.

The coats are single-breasted models of the approved cut and Style of this Season's "CLUB CLOTHES" make. Thoroughly Tailored, of course.

We don't claim they are worth double. If they were, we could not sell them for $28. But we do claim that there's nothing to equal them at this price.
